Dear Dr. Ramaiyulis Ramaiyulis,

Your manuscript has been successfully submitted online and is presently being given full consideration for publication in the World's Veterinary Journal (WVJ).

We have also sent you an email regarding your submission. If you still haven't received an email in your inbox after some time, please check your spam or junk folder.

The manuscript is already in review process. The authors can track the status of their article throughout the peer-review process directly via journal emails by providing article's title and date of submission.

Authors are responsible for publication costs (if any), which will be invoiced shortly before the article is published.

Thank you for your submission

Sincerely,

Managing editor of World's Veterinary Journal

ABSTRACT: (Do not omit from manuscript file.) *

This study aims to evaluate the mitigation of methane gas production by giving concentrate and tannin supplementation in Indonesian local beef cattle. The study was conducted in vivo using 12 Bali cattle with a basal ration of field grass (control), the addition of concentrate (75:25% DM), and tannin supplementation of 0.12 and 0.18 (%DM concentrate). The concentrate contains 7.5% crude protein and 71.25% TDN and tannin supplementation using gambir (Uncaria gambir Roxb) tannin extract. The results showed that dry matter consumption significantly increased with the addition of concentrate, crude protein digestibility, and total digestible nutrients. Furthermore, 0.18% tannin supplementation can mitigate 49.7% methane gas production resulting in energy efficiency, which is reflected in the weight gain rate of 0.75 kg/day

Dear WVJ Editors,

We are proud to have selected the World's Veterinary Journal for the publication of our article entitled: "Effect of a tannin-containing supplement on enteric methane emissions, total digestible nutrients, and average daily gain of local Indonesian beef cattle."

We have worked hard; Ramaiyulis supervised the experiment and wrote the original manuscript. D. Kurnia, D. Syukriani, and I. Irda conducted the experiment and data analysis. Y. Metri prepared tables and finalized the draft. The final version of the manuscript was read and approved by all authors.

We fully comply with the terms of review to the editor, but we have given 3 names of competent reviewers in reviewing this article.

We hope that this article can be processed; thankyou

best regrd,

Ramaiyulis
